Market Outlook:

The second quarter of 2025 saw some key events direct prices lower, before moving higher toward end of the quarter on regional tensions.

The quarter began with the US announcing "Liberation Day" tariffs on fertilizer imports from various origins, including Saudi supply at 10%.

Supply availability will increase between May and late Q3 as China announced export quotas to allow the temporary outflow of urea.

Mid-June saw geopolitical tensions rise as Israel and Iran were in conflict, resulting in production outages of regional fertilizer units, increased energy prices, and concern around the supply chain movement along the Strait of Hormuz which resulted in an increase in urea prices. Several spot cargoes were sold by SABIC Agri-Nutrients amid the price increase.

In the third quarter, supply availability will be limited despite ongoing exports from China as several regional producers usually experience a reduction in run rates during summer, when gas for electricity is prioritized over fertilizer production. Prices will keep firming supported by seasonal demand mainly from India, Oceania, Brazil, and Europe.

CEO MESSAGE

Fahad Al-Battar
Chief Executive Officer

The second quarter of 2025 witnessed notable shifts in the fertilizer market, ranging from international trade policies to geopolitical tensions, all of which tested the readiness and clarity of SABIC Agri-Nutrients' strategic vision, as well as its ability to adapt in an ever-changing global environment.

U.S.-imposed tariffs introduced volatility into global trade flows, while the resumption of Chinese exports, following a period of restrictions, led to an increase in global supply. At the same time, escalating regional tensions reduced supply due to the temporary shutdown of several producers. Despite these rapid fluctuations in the supply balance, demand fundamentals remained strong. Amid these abrupt market changes, the company was able to navigate conditions optimally, maximizing returns while maintaining high production reliability and supply chain stability for our customers worldwide.

Net income for the quarter reached SAR 1,060 million, representing an 8% increase compared to the previous quarter. Furthermore, net income rose by 50% year-over-year, driven by higher average selling prices. This reflects SABIC Agri-Nutrients' ongoing commitment to maximize its revenues and its focus on capital discipline, cost optimization, and effective working capital management, all contributing to the company's financial stability and growth.

Sales volumes for the quarter reached 1,938 thousand metric tons, marking a 6% increase from the 1,836 thousand metric tons sold in the previous quarter. This figure is consistent with the 1,940 thousand metric tons sold in the same quarter of the prior year. Overall, total sales volumes for the current period stood at 3,774 thousand metric tons, an 8% increase compared to 3,492 thousand metric tons in the same period of 2024.

Looking ahead to the third quarter, our outlook suggests price strength will continue, supported by seasonal demand and reduced supply, as some regional producers cut operating rates during the summer, prioritizing energy use for power generation over fertilizer production. In light of these expectations, our global reach, operational efficiency, and continued focus on customer service position us well to adapt to evolving conditions and capture future opportunities.
